IN BANKRUPTCY

In the matter of STONE MAYO, SNOW & CO., Bankrupts, against whom a petition was filed in said Court, February 26th, A D 1875

DISTRICT OF MAINE, ss.

A warrant in Bankruptcy has been issued, by said Court, against the estate of Stone Mayo, Jr. of Bangor, William H Mayo, of Monson, Solomon Jesse Snow, and Charles W Snow, of the County of Penobscot, and State of Maine, in the said District, they have been duly adjudged bankrupts, individually and as members of the firm of Mayo, Snow & Co., upon petition of their creditors. And the payment of any debts, and the delivery of any property belonging to said bankrupts, to or to their use, and the transfer of any property by them are forbidden by law. A meeting of the creditors of said bankrupts, to prove their debts, and choose one or more assignees of their estates, will be held at a Court of Bankruptcy, to be holden at the Bankrupt Court Room, in said District, on the 9th day of June, A. D. 1875, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the office of Charles Hamlin, Esq., one of the Registers in Bankruptcy of said County.

A Down Town Merchant,

Having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the agonies and cries of a suffering babe, and becoming convinced that Miss WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP was just the article needed, procured a supply for the child. On reaching home and acquainting his wife with what he had done, she refused to have it administered to the child, as she was annoyed in no other way than by the thought that the child passed so restless, and the parents without sleep. Returning home the day following the father found the baby still worse, and while contemplating another sleepless night, the mother stepped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the father with the child. Being her absence he administered a portion of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and need only tell the sequel. The baby slept well, and the little fellow awoke in the morning bright and happy. The mother was delighted with the sudden and wonderful change, and although at first of mind at the deception practiced upon her, has continued to use the Syrup, and suffering, crying babies are a stranger to her household. A single trial of the Syrup, never has failed to relieve the baby, and often cause the premature of the mother

CAPTURE OF THE MARGARETTA

The Marguerite, whose history is narrated in the St. Nicholas for July by George J. Varney, was the first British vessel captured by the Americans during the Revolutionary war. She had conveyed some troops sent from Boston to Machias, Maine in search of Tighes for the use of the British at Boston. The people of Machias had just heard news of the battle of Lexington and had cut of their liberty pole which the captain of the Margaretta demanded they should be let down. But the Machias people would not like down the pole. On Sunday, while the captain was in church, he became nearly being captured by a party of men whom he saw crossing the river on logs. He had just time to jump out of the window, and barely succeeded in making his way on board his ship. The capture of the Margaretta is described as follows:

Early on Monday morning four young men took possession of one of the lumber sloops and, hanging her up to the wharf, gave three cheers, to call the attention of the villagers. Fifty-five athletic men were soon gathered at the wharf, and a design of capturing the Margaretta was made known to them. Arming themselves as well as they were able with such weapons as they could find, they set sail in pursuit of the British vessel, which was lying at anchor two miles below.

As yet they had no commander, but an election was held on the way, by which Jeremiah O'Brien, the oldest of six noble brothers, on board, was unanimously chosen captain. He immediately gave permission for all who did not wish to engage in the attack to leave the vessel, and fifty-one men accordingly went ashore in the boat.

When the Margaretta observed the approach of the sloop she weighed anchor and crowded on all sail to avoid a conflict. An exchange of shots was then made on both boats, but, continuing her flight she ran into Holmes's Bay, and took a spar from a vessel lying there.

While repairs were making the sloop hove in sight, and the Margaretta stood out to sea, in hope still of avoiding her. As numbers in Captain Moore's vessel, however, left the latter no hope of increase the speed of her vessel, but this, too, was ineffectual. Finding the sloop fast closing upon him he at length opened fire upon her.

The Margaretta had no armament of any light kind, but fourteen swivels, while the sloop had only a single cannon, cumbrously mounted with which to return the fire. The first discharge killed the Margaretta's boatswain and carried off the quarter deck. The cannon broke and suddenly wounded, throwing the sails back, and bringing her deck into full view of her pursuers. Those of the patriots who had previously discharged them

In a very few moments the vessels came together. Then ensued a contest with muskets. Captain Moore himself throwing handgrenades into the sloop with considerable effect. An attempt was made by the patriots to board the schooner, but the commander—John O'Brien, brother of the commander—repelled her back. Some of the British crew discharged their guns at him almost at the same moment, but not a ball struck him. Then they charged upon him with bayonets, but he escaped these by jumping overboard. The assailants had fallen some forty yards apart, but he swam to the sloop, and was taken on board without having received any worse harm than a wetting.

The American vessel was again brought alongside the enemy, and twenty men jumped the ship with pistols, sprang on board the schooner. Captain Moore had thrown his sword, pierced by two balls, and the conflict was so fierce that the officer left in command fled, pursued by two balls, and the conflict was so fierce that the other left in command fled, pursued by two balls, and the conflict was so fierce that the other left in command fled, pursued by two balls, and the conflict was so fierce that the other

DEMORALIZED WARRIORS

For a band of warriors who took the field with such belligerent manifestoes, the patriot champions of Gen Roberts exhibit a remarkable demoralization over the bursting of a preliminary shell in their camp. The candidate himself springs into the field with his sonorous proclamation on the "aggressive campaign and direct retaliation," but back in military order and eager to have to the foe. But a little blister has evaporated like the gas from a punctured balloon at the first acceptance of their challenge and the calm, courteous, but historical review of Gen Roberts' claims as a patriot soldier written by an officer who fought through to the final triumph of the Union cause has set the whole Bodfordian camp by the ears. Having invited the investigation of their claims to public confidence they have no other recourse in fury of the presentation of the facts than to indulge in personal abuse of Col Smith which will harm him just as little and will help their own cause. Ample time has been afforded for a reply if any reply were possible, but no one of Gen Roberts champions has undertaken to meet the arraignment of the candidate so unanswerably put in motion on his record as a Union soldier. One or two anonymous scribblers in such papers as the Portland Argus and Bangor Commercial have thrust themselves with a feeble attempt as to the origin of Col Smith's letter but they have not attempted to correct parts damaging to their candidate and Union with the worst enemies of the Union in the bloody desert of Maine during the darkest days of the Rebellion.

It is amusing to note how promptly the desperadoes of the Bangor Democrat stripe rally to the support of Gen Roberts. James Buchanan, political assassination with themselves and two sons Marcellus Emory, all manning the assassination's gun to prevent the election of Roberts political enemy. The sorriest point of which is the fact that Roberts was in sympathy with Emory and these sons during the desperate period of the struggle with rebellion. So much so that he failed to release the and at the time of such association that at this late day is so insulting as an old friend and one who is repudiating all treason and to him and repeatedly presented his name in these columns as the leading of publishing disloyal sentiments actually a wrongful imputation. Does the man imagine that his public position is so soon and so blotted out. If he is, it may be well to recall still other specimens of his support when it became the case of the patriot soldier in the days of the rebellion. In the Bangor Democrat of the 21st of May, 1861 while our armies were in the field contributing the best of treason to color Marcellus Emory gave evidence of what his legislative action would be in such an emergency by calling for some senator to "go down and talk to our dilly appeal to the Union in war which he suggest as follows:

"SENATORS: You cannot conciliate the South by your present measures. Not a single State will take by your present or any measure you can. What then can you do? You cannot conquer, you cannot gain, but you can address the * * * *

And then he goes on to make his magnificent senator tell us the loyal administration this:

"But in such a war as this UNION IS IN THE DISTANT impracticable in its means and ruinous in its consequences. I would not contribute a single effort nor a single shilling. I do not all for we regret on the heads of those who have been guilty, the loyal administration and Congress pleasantly. I only recommend them to MAKE THIS RETREAT. LET THEM WALK OFF AND LET THEM MAKE HASTE, or they may be sure that SPEED AND CONDIGN PUNISHMENT will overtake them.

A little later the same "patriot" published a call for a Democratic State Convention dated July 1, 1861 signed by himself as chairman. This call, written months after rebel batteries had assailed the National flag on Fort Sumter, uttered this cowardly appeal to a political party to demand a surrender to traitors:

"Therefore, believing it to be the UNANIMOUS SENTIMENT and HEARTFELT DESIRE of the political organization which we represent, we cordially invite to participate in our primary elections, all men, by whatever party name heretofore known, who ARE OPPOSED TO THIS UNHOLY CIVIL WAR, and in favor of the IMMEDIATE RESTORATION OF PEACE by negotiation and compromise."

On the 9th of July 1861, he denounced President Lincoln's message calling for loyal troops, as a "monstrous document," charged the President with falsehood and declared that the soldiers and money were demanded only "to crush out the liberties of a mighty and united people," to "overthrow Constitutional liberty and erect a despotism in its ruins." And following up this strain he issued this "patriotic" appeal to the people of the North, who were then preparing to maintain the supremacy of the Union at any and all costs

O, that we could arouse the farmers, the mechanics, the toiling millions of the North who earn their bread in the sweat of their brows, to a realizing sense of the ruin, of the hardships of the sufferings and deprivations that are in store for them in the womb of this gigantic civil war. O, THAT WE COULD RALLY THEM TO RESIST IN THIS CRISIS, the machinations of the wealth of the country who hope to impose labor down to its lowest range."

But we find no allusion in this paper that Emery manifested his "sympathy" with the "patriot soldier;" we find him a leading spirit in the Democratic Convention at Dexter, assembled on July 4th, 1864, when the Rebellion was gasping in the tightening clutch of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, and there on the anniversary of the Nation's birth, in an assemblage gathered to demand peace at any price, the editor of the Democrat delivered an inspiring address from which we give the following extracts as reported in his paper.

* * * * "He would not deceive them if he could, he could not, if he would. They were standing to-day AMIDST THE WRECK AND RUINS of the most glorious Republic that ever adorned the earth, and over THE GRAVE OF BURIED LIBERTY. The gentle summer winds which were sighing so mournfully through that grand old forest seemed to him to be playing the requiem of the Union,—BURIED BEYOND THE HOPE OF RESURRECTION.

* * * *

As he looked upon that banner now, he felt that that cluster of stars only remained which LOOKING EMBLEM of a glory and a joy which ONCE EXISTED but ARE NOW GONE FOREVER. He almost fail that he could reach forth his hand, and PLUCK FROM that MOCKING CONSTELLATION the bright star that glitters to the name of Maine; but he would leave the STRIPES behind, AS A FITTING EMBLEM OF HER PRESENT DEGRADATION!

* * * *

He would not appeal to DEMOCRATS to exert their power and influence to end the war "THEIR HEARTS WERE ALREADY IN THE WORK, but he would appeal to REPUBLICANS—to all who had hit heretofore given their support to the WAR * * * to unite with all good men to PUT AN END TO THIS ACCURSED WAR.

* * * *

Throughout, the meeting was a GRAND SUCCESS. It was mighty in numbers, there being more than fifteen thousand people present. It showed that in the DEMOCRACY OF MAINE THERE IS BUT ONE, BROUGHT AND ONE MIND—PEACE."

This was in 1864 and we believe that none of General Robert's "comrades" will claim that he had not then left the field. If such a speech as the above by the man who assumes the role of leading champion of the Democratic candidate does not handicap with the patriot soldier's programme history and facts are solely accountable, and not those who turn back to the record.

We have given but a few random examples of the disloyalty, cowardice and sedition published and uttered by General Roberts' champion throughout the terrible struggle which ended in spite of his efforts and wishes in a glorious triumph of the Union. There are others in abundance to be presented whenever it may be necessary to remind our people of the type of "patriotism" displayed by the present leaders of the Democratic party during the "days that tried men's souls." As this issue of Tuesday Mr Emery endeavors to present a belligerent front, such reminiscences of the war period should not be unwelcome. The Commercial says:

"We have before said that the nomination of General Roberts means BATTLE all our Union enemy each of it. It means HALF not only in grandeur and in the Penobscot valley in 1870, but," etc., etc.

So warlike a champion should not cry out so loudly as the first hot from our outposts notwithstanding it is so well aimed by Colonel Smith. And the reminiscences we have given of a former period when Bangor and the Penobscot valley were thrilling with military enthusiasm, which meant more than a sounding pronunciamento may serve to indicate the response which the masses of this patriotic section will give to the "war bulletins" of the copperhead leaders of 1861—1864.

* * * *

The letter signed "Capital Guard," printed in the Argus and copied in the Commercial is childishly false in its insinuations about the publication of Col Smith's letter. This comment, which has so demoralized the enemy, was first seen by the editor of this paper when furnished to him on Wednesday, and was at once put into type for Thursday morning when it appeared. If any one wishes to test the Colonel's facts, it would be a good plan for some zealous champion of the General to come out at once over his own signature, as Colonel Smith has done. We have no doubt they will find him ready.

The Pittsburg Telegraph which, perhaps, is as competent to express an opinion on the subject as any paper in Pennsylvania, has the following respecting the political prospects there. "It is rather early to express an opinion of the political campaign in this State, but a Brief view Thursday from Gov Hartranft and Hon Henry Rawle the candidate on the Republican ticket for Governor and State Treasurer has turned attention in that direction. Gov Hartranft, who is to-day the popular idol, is possible for a public man to be, having by his admirable conduct of the affairs of his high office won the favored and approval of all parties. So on the question that the Republican State ticket will be elected by a handsome majority. The Governor is not indebted to be enthusiastic or to stop over in his estimates or expectations, but is rather given to looking squarely at both sides of a case, and discounting the conclusions of his more sanguine supporters. At all events, the views of the political situation in Pennsylvania coincides with those generally entertained by such as have given it careful attention. The Republican ticket has what it did not have in 1873 the cordial support of the bad, political Republican press of the State including that of the organs of the party, and there is every reason to believe the State ticket will receive the full Republican vote of the Commonwealth."

Walter P Janney, geologist of the Black Hills expedition in a letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, dated June 22d, says that while examining the gravel deposits at the North Bend of Castle Creek, he found gold in small quantities in bars or terraces of alluvial quartz-gravel, resting on the bed of a rock about ten feet above the present level of the stream. The area of these bars was quite limited and the gold which they contained had evidently been furnished by the quartz veins traversing the slates along the stream. There was considerable excitement among the soldiers and mounters about gold on the arrival of the expedition on French Creek, but as no one obtained even by several hours hard labor more than a few cents worth of gold dust, none of the abundance was afterward seen working for the precious metal. About 15 miners have located claims on the creek and the reports they give of the richness of gravel bars, are greatly exaggerated.

The committee on information and statistics of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, upon a review of the reports from seven States, gives a very encouraging opinion upon the present condition of the cotton crop. Of the whole it is more favorable than last year at this time. It is also said that throughout the South, greater attention has been paid to cereal crops and the inhabitants in case of a favorable season will be much more independent than usual of other and imported food for man and beast. Of course all that can be said now, is, that the prospect is encouraging. There may be drought, insects or storms. On the other hand, there is no more by fear now in this regard than there is ordinarily. If a good season shall be vouchsafed, the South will have products which will place it peculiarly in an excellent position. This is to be hoped on all accounts. We all desire to see that section of our country regaining its prosperity; lifting itself out of the impression of poverty; restoring hope and the friction of well directed industry. Yet more, the North wishes to see the South able to improve its territory, gaining in all the elements of a prosperous, powerful and capital life, because among other things such a condition leads to conservative views, to politics, peace and justice and the advancement of the whole country.

Preparations for a dramatic scene are making in London. Years since, as the story goes, a sister of the Sultan of Zanzibar fell in love with a young German clerk in the house of a Zanzibar merchant, fled the country in his company, and married him. Her family disowned her. She is now a widow, and has been living in Presden, caring for the education of her children. Her beauty, the nobility of her character, and her romantic history have inspired the German Imperial family with interest in her future, and she has been persuaded to go to London in anticipation of the Sultan's visit. A meeting with him has been planned. At sight of her old memories are to crowd into his mind, and the brother and sister are to fall into each other's arms and weep.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

THE ORATION AND POEM BY REV. DR. CHEEVER AND HENRY W. LONGFELLOW OF THE CLASS OF '25—MEETINGS OF THE ALUMNI AND COLLEGE BOARDS, BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS, ETC.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

BRUNSWICK July 7.

The largest number of Alumni ever seen at any commencement gathered to listen to the poem and oration. The subject of Mr. Longfellow's poem was, "Nos Hortum Salutemus." It was listened to with marked attention by all of the large assembly present. The subject of Dr. Cheever's oration was "Science and Religion." Following is a brief abstract

After those fifty years of our own experience, as we can, we propose a few thoughts on the argument derived from six thousand years, for the inevitable union of Science and Religion in the education of the human mind. A work which all civilized governments on earth are undertaking ought to have some fixed principles. These six thousand years have demonstrated three principles; and our education in God's experimental university has dictated three principles for the spread of organizing and regenerating truth throughout the world. These six thousand years are very likely but the entrance upon 365 000 of benevolent activity, one of them a days being taken for a thousand of God's years. If it were so even in the creation of the schoolhouse for man's childhood; how much more in the work of redemption for man's majority and heaven? And therefore a manifest thy necessity for the elements of vastness and certainty in the structure of a revelation for such a boundless succession of cycles and generations.

For the Bible itself, as the Word of God, must be the master of all ages, and its infallible spirit must be the inspiration both of science and religion. So that, science and religion are simply the witnesses, but not the judge of divine truth, of which, indeed, God himself, but neither science nor religion, is the Author. A source between Newton and the Bible there is no more conflict than between Newton's Principia and his own; than there can be, one knows, but between the nature of the Municipal Officers thereof shall the earth and the facts of the moon and the sun. We look first at God's method and materials in preparing, as a second and man's right rule in using the two disclosures of Nature and Divine Revelation for the education and perfections of all mankind. We look at its necessity and indispensableness of your early faith, and the disastrous power of a scientific prejudice against it. We mark the simplest and unscientific method selected to for creating such a prejudice, and only a few notes can be given.—We give some extraordinary and instructive instances of the power of such prejudice, and of the mistakes of science in regard to God's word through the medium of the same. It is not Christian to think it is any danger of being spoiled by such philosophy and vain deceit, but ignorant and ill-grounded disciples whom Paul bid beware lest any spoil them with such pretended science. Guess, but not religion, nor the word of God, which cannot be falsified. But men may handle its batteries as unskilfully as he best, and you should not live to go a gunning with such ignoramuses. If you had to do it, you would put such sportsmen always in front of you; taking care to keep out of all possible range of their muskets.

The Alumni met this morning and nominated Hon W. W. Fuller of Chicago, to fill the vacancy in the Board of Overseers.

There is another vacancy to be filled by the Board itself. Hon W D Northend made a report upon the finances of the college. At out $13,000 are passing to make out the $100,000. It is expected this sum will be immediately subscribed. The committee on the Memorial Hall fund reports a debt of $6,000, upon which interest has to be paid. Measures are being taken to pay off the debt. The doings of the Boards during the sessions of the last two days may be briefly summarized as follows:

E M Smythe is elected utor in mathematics and teacher in the gymnasium at $1,000 salary.

The scholarship fund from the estate of Andrew Dennison was accepted.

Prof. Young was elected Treasurer for three years.

Thirty thousand dollars were paid in toward the endowment fund.

The College income is $10,230.63, and it has no debt. The finances are in a flourishing condition.

Prof M C Carmichael was elected Professor of Rhetoric, Oratory and English Literature.

J P Booker, Esq., was elected Secretary of the Board of Overseers.

The cabinet of minerals and fossils, presented by Mrs. Margaret Allen Elton, was accepted.

The thanks of the Board were presented to Prof. Young for the able, faithful, gratuitous discharge of the duties of Treasurer the past year.

Professor Packard furnishes the following necrology:

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE PLYMOUTH CHURCH PEW-HOLDERS.

A Large and Enthusiastic Meeting.

MR. BEECHER'S SALARY RAISED TO $100,000.

The Meeting in the Lecture-room Mr. Beecher's Resolution.

NEW YORK, July 7. Virtually nothing of the Plymouth Society which supposed of the pew holders of Plymouth Church packed in the lecture room of the church this evening with B Hotchkiss in the chair. The chairman stated to the meeting had been called for the purpose of considering the question of raising Mr Beecher's salary. Henry W Sage then offered a resolution that the sum of the pastor for the ensuing year be $100,000 instead of $50,000 as heretofore paid.

Remarks of R. S. Raymond

Upon this being put by H W Rogers that the whole matter remained the request of the society. Reporters be excluded, a motion which was carried by a vote of the pew holders of the present. H Hotchkiss moved to reconsider the vote. This motion was put to the meeting by the chairman and declared lost. Mr Hotchkiss demanded a division of the house. The motion was then declared carried by a vote of 70 to 60.

Remarks by H. B. Metz.

S B White then moved a brief and pertinent address in favor of the passage of the resolution. He said that while the salary of a minister is nothing to him, he thought that a church should be able to raise for its minister what he and his friends had given to other objects. They had made no attempt to raise the money, but he thought if a committee were appointed it could be done in a few days. He would be much disappointed if such a committee could not be appointed

GOD SPEED THE PLOW.

I expect the plow-share' toil on not
I expect it always the soil,
Or until the fruitful soil
Why should the honest plowman shirk
From manful toil to the vast
Of learning soul of wisdom, since
The mind that makes the man?

God speed the plow-shares' and the hands
That till the fruitful lands,
For there is naught in this world so wise,
So great like hosts of words,
And though the hands are stark with toil
And flushed the manly brow,
It matter not, for God will bless
The labors of the plow

THE LIFE OF THE HOUSE.

AN ANCIENT BRETON LEGEND

The Duke of Provence knocked on his daughter's door with the hilt of his sword

"Arise Magnelonne! it is break of day and the angelus will soon sound; the brothers are at their labors; the horses paw the ground in the court it is time to depart."

Bradamante, after a bloody war in other times in the country of Provence, that Magnelonne was nurtured while there child to the age of their whereas of the same age

At this day they had grown up separate in the mother's but the time had now come to conduct Magnelonne to her husband

Magnelonne made the sign of the cross on her forehead and on the virgin she was to wear as her bridal robe with the long veil hanging to the floor. Then very pale and trembling. Her brothers looking at her

Prince Herbert's squire asked

"Is the time of departure so near?"

"Yes, we must get there without delay, we have yet plains and forests and mountains to traverse before we arrive at the castle of Montpellier."

Then Magnelonne bowed her head in silence. Nothing spoke to her of her separation from the home where she was born

Then she could touch the objects which surrounded her childhood for the last time

The wife will only enter there when the Magnelonne to it as a noble and beautiful woman who is the life of the house"

At these words the hermit disappeared and Magnelonne having taken a few steps further, touched the door of the house with the top of the foot, the door opened, and immediately the whole house seemed illuminated. The most delicious music sounded through the vast galleries, and Prince Herbert magnificently arrived, hurried followed by his retainers to present his hand to Magnelonne

Then Magnelonne smiled and did not refuse to give up her hand to husband. But when she was the guest of sapphire of the sea should be the lace to the old Duke and the bracelets which waited for her in the castle of Montpellier

To be sure a child could the Duke have preferred thy husband to all others. Thou shalt be a noble lady and shalt command many servants. For God knows many of them would stand in the antechamber of the Duke of Provence, and would have the life of the house!"

Thus Magnelonne smiled and did not refuse to give up her hand to husband. But when she was the guest of sapphire of the sea should be the lace to the old Duke and the bracelets which waited for her in the castle of Montpellier

To be sure a child could the Duke have preferred thy husband to all others. Thou shalt be a noble lady and shalt command many servants. For God knows many of them would stand in the antechamber of the Duke of Provence, and would have the life of the house!"

Then
